What is a Brand?

By: Bette Kuboushek, GFWC Communications and Public Relations Committee Member

What is a brand? According to Investopedia, a brand is a product or a business that has a distinct identity in the perception of consumers. The brand is created through elements of design, packaging, and advertising that distinguish the product from its competitors. We see GFWC's brand in our emblem/logo and in all that we do as an organization.

When GFWC rolled out the new emblem brand in November 2023, the purpose was to ensure consistency throughout the Federation. Throughout the Federation's 130 plus years of service, there have been many changes to the organization. But our mission has stayed the same—community improvement through volunteer service.

To rebrand the General Federation of Women's Clubs, each member, club, district, and state leader must actively participate in the effort. For years, we have asked members to be prepared with an elevator speech, wear emblematic apparel, and always be ready to promote GFWC as often as possible.

Check out the updated Style Guide in the member portal under “S” and the new emblems under “E.” The Style Guide has a wealth of information on ways to use the emblem, and there are assorted styles and colors to use, as well as emblems for specific states and regions.

When using the GFWC emblem on any social media outlets, be sure to use the new, updated one. You could also use your state or region emblem as the cover photo on your state or club Facebook page.

When posting on social media, use #IAMGFWC.

By using these ideas, you are ensuring that the entire world will know who GFWC is...The General Federation of Women’s Clubs!
